

The business process model lets you model the business activities. A 'Process' can cut across many departments or divisions of a larger entity. It describes something a business does as part of its normal activity; focusing mainly on the inputs, outputs, goals and key events that drive the process.